This Week's Highlights

Monday

Did your student bring in their WEB today? WEBs are due every Monday!

Tuesday

Smile and have a great day!

Wednesday

Did you read last night? How about reading tonight!

Thursday

MAP test today!
Weekly homework (wordmaster word work) due today!

Friday

NO SCHOOL TODAY
(for students, I will be here ☺)

News of Note:

MAP testing for the next two weeks—for us that means one hour one day during the week.

Many parents have asked me about my week off. I am pursuing an MFA in creative writing at Hamline University. I spent the week with authors. My mornings were filled with workshops around pieces of writing (much like your student does when a peer looks at their piece of writing). I spent my afternoons at lectures and seminars given by authors from all around the United States. It was an invigorating experience and I bring it all back to share with your children in class.

Math:

4th graders begin unit #7 on fractions this week. 5th graders are working on unit #6—measurement.

Social Studies:

4th graders should be close to finished taking their notes and will begin organizing them.

Science:

5th graders begin work with pulleys this week.

Writing:

Continue work on the essay unit.

Contemplation begins on what piece to use for our hardcover books.
